Notice:

1. PhD students must complete all qualifying examinations before the submission of the PhD thesis. PhD students need to pass all the qualifying examinations within three years of enrollment or direct pursuit of the PhD degree (excluding the period of suspension) or within four years for in-service students (excluding the period of suspension). Those who fail to pass the qualifying examinations in time will be withdrawn from the program. Students who directly pursue the doctoral degree program but fail in the doctoral candidacy qualifying examination may apply for continuing the study in the master's degree program subject to the review and approval of the Department Affairs Meeting and the final approval of the President of NYCU.
2. PhD qualifying examinations include written and oral examinations. Students who pass all qualifying examinations are considered as doctoral candidates and will be certified by the department.
  - I. The qualifying examination will be held once per semester. Students who are planning on taking the examination should register at the department office one month ahead of time.
  - II. PhD qualifying written examination takes place one week after the final examination every semester. The exact date and time will be announced by the department office.
  - III. The result of the qualifying examination will be sent out by the department two weeks after the examination.
  - IV. Students who failed the qualifying examinations within the regulated number of years are provided with one chance to resit the exams.
